Somewhere, My Love

Moderately

Words by Paul Francis Webster Music by Maurice Jarre

"Lara's Theme" kept welling up throughout the film Doctor Zhivago. It was the musical accompaniment for the character, played by Julie Christie, who was the great love of Zhivago's life in the adaptation of Boris Pasternak's 1958 Nobel Prize-winning novel. The Russian Pasternak rejected the prize for political reasons, but the prize-winning aura of his work continued into the film re-creation when Maurice Jarre's score won the composer his second Academy Award in 1965. (His first was for his score for Lawrence of Arabia in 1962.) "Lara's Theme" emerged as a hit song in 1966, when Paul Francis Webster adapted it and added the lyrics that turned it into "Somewhere, My Love."

(Lara's Theme from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Motion Picture Doctor Zhivago)

The musical score consists of three staves. The top staff is for voice and piano, with lyrics written below the notes. The middle staff is for guitar chords. The bottom staff is for piano. The score is in 3/4 time, key of G major.
